Western Australian hospitality workers now have another avenue to obtain greater accredited training on the job.

Crown Perth's own Registered Training Organisation, the Crown College, has launched the Certificate III in Hospitality program for its Food and Beverage (F&B) portfolio.

The course provides Crown Perth F&B team members with a nationally recognised qualification, while they are still able to work.

Already 11 current team members in Crown Perth's F&B team have been enrolled in the 14-month course, which will sharpen their skills across a broad range of hospitality skills such as barista, cocktails, service and coaching.

This initiative reflects Crown's continued investment in the development of WA's hospitality workforce—supporting local jobs, career pathways, and the broader visitor economy.

As one of Western Australia's largest single site employer, Crown College nationally contributes to approximately 10% of all Certificate III in Hospitality graduates through its Gaming, Hospitality and Security intakes.

In Western Australia alone, this translates to a steady pipeline of job-ready professionals entering a key growth industry, with direct benefits to restaurants, hotels, tourism operators, and the state economy at large.

Crown Perth CEO Brian Pereira said offering the course to team members whilst they work at Crown gives them a way to both work and improve their longer-term employment prospects.

"Workforce development is one of the most powerful ways Crown contributes to Western Australia's tourism economy."

"By investing in training and upskilling, we're strengthening not only our own venues, but the entire hospitality ecosystem in Western Australia."

The program highlights Crown's commitment to being more than an entertainment destination — it's also a major contributor to skills development, economic resilience, and community wellbeing. With tourism and hospitality identified as strategic industries for WA, Crown's role in education and training supports long-term recovery and growth.

As this new intake of students embarks on their learning journey, Crown Perth remains focused on building the next generation of local talent — ensuring our teams continue to deliver world-class experiences for every guest, every day.
