Thursday, 9 January 2025: Golden Century at Crown Sydney will open on Monday, 20 January, with reservations opening today in time for Lunar New Year. Whilst the grand opening will not take place until early February, the Wong family have opened bookings early for their loyal guests and those wanting a first sneak peak of the restaurant's iconic return and new location. Golden Century will reprise the menu from its original location in Sussex Street.

Co-owner, Billy Wong, said: "Opening Golden Century at such an auspicious time - on the cusp of Lunar New Year - feels like a fitting new beginning for us. We have always put hospitality first, and are so excited to open the doors to our beloved guests, including those who are familiar with our food and excited to once again enjoy it, and those who will be trying it for the first time."

Along with signature dishes and live seafood from the tanks, Golden Century will also bring back their famed yum cha offering. Diners can enjoy a selection of over 80 traditional Cantonese dishes - steamed dim sum including xiao long bao, prawn golden coin dumplings and chicken and date siu mai; rice rolls including XO sauce stir-fried rice paper rolls and rice paper rolls with pork ribs and black bean sauce; pan and deep fried dim sum including taro cakes, fried prawn wontons and BBQ pork puff pastry; as well as a range of vegetarian options.

Crown Sydney CEO, Stanford Le, said: "We are excited to ring in the New Year, as well as Lunar New Year across our resort, with the opening of Golden Century. Billy, Eric and Linda Wong exemplify graciousness and warmth through their premium hospitality, and we welcome them to the Crown family and Barangaroo precinct."

Golden Century will also celebrate Lunar New Year with multiple specials, including poon Choi - a traditional Cantonese festival meal including many layers of ingredients such as meat and shellfish; loi hei - a 'prosperity toss' salad; new year cake; and turnip cake.
